BRAD STEVENS
Head Coach

BRAD STEVENS begins his seventh season as Head Coach for the Boston Celtics. He was named the 17th head coach in the history of the Boston Celtics on July 3, 2013.

In his sixth season in Boston, Stevens led the Celtics to a 49-33 record (.597) which placed them in to a first round series against Indiana during which the Celtics completed their first 4-0 sweep since the 2010-11 season. The Celtics would then fall to the Bucks 4-1 in the second round. On January 21, 2019 in a 107-99 win over the Heat Stevens recorded his 250th career win. Stevens' record with the Celtics over six seasons now stands at 270-222 (.549). His 270 wins entering the 2019-20 season ranks him 5th all-time in franchise history for coaching wins.

In his fifth season in Boston, Stevens led the Celtics to a 55-27 record and a second consecutive appearance in the Eastern Conference Finals and one game from appearing in the NBA Finals after a Game 7 loss to the Cleveland Cavaliers in the ECF. This marked the first time that the Celtics had made consecutive appearances in the Eastern Conference Finals since the 1986-87 and 1987-88 seasons. Stevens' record with the Celtics over five seasons now stands at 221-189 (.539).

In his fourth season in Boston, Stevens led the Celtics to an Eastern Conference-best record of 53-29 record as well as an appearance in the Eastern Conference Finals against Cleveland. Stevens earned the honor of coaching the Eastern Conference All-Star team for the 2017 NBA All-Star Game in New Orleans. He is the sixth Celtics head coach to earn the honor joining Red Auerbach, Tom Heinsohn, K.C. Jones, Doc Rivers, Bill Fitch and Chris Ford.

In his third season with the Celtics, Stevens led the team to a playoff appearance and finished with a 48-34 record. He became just the third coach in franchise history to win NBA Coach of the Month multiple times when he was named the Eastern Conference Coach of the Month for the second time during the month of February when the team posted an Eastern Conference-best 9-3 record. Stevens recorded his first career playoff victory on April 22 when they beat the Atlanta Hawks 111-103 in Boston.

In his second season with the Celtics, Stevens led the team to a playoff appearance with a furious finish to the season. After starting the season 16-30 the team finished the season 23-12 to clinch the seventh seed in the Eastern Conference. During the month of April when the team was 7-1 he was named the Eastern Conference Coach of the Month and became the fifth Celtic Head Coach to win the award joining K.C. Jones, Jimmy Rodgers, Chris Ford and Glenn "Doc" Rivers.

Stevens, 39, joined the Celtics after coaching Butler University where he boasted a 166-49 record, four league regular season championships, three league tournament titles and six trips to post-season tournament play. He has the top two single season win totals in Butler and Horizon League history, and he became the only coach in school history to lead a team to the NCAA Division I national championship game which he did twice.

Stevens owns two Horizon League Coach of the Year awards and has rewritten the NCAA record book for Best Coaching Starts by Wins. During the 2012-13 season, he moved into the top spot on the six-year list with 165 victories. He captured the five-year record (139), moving ahead of Everett Case of North Carolina State (1947-51) in 2011-12, and he owns the three-year (89) and four-year (117) records. He is second on the two-year list with 56 wins.

Stevens left a position as a marketing associate at Eli Lilly and Company in Indianapolis to pursue a career in basketball coaching. He served in a volunteer capacity in Butler's basketball office during the summer of 2000, before eventually gaining a full-time administrative position under Thad Matta. Stevens joined the Bulldogs' staff in 2000-01 as coordinator of basketball operations, handling a variety of administrative duties. He was offered a full-time assistant coaching position by Todd Lickliter in 2001-02. Stevens worked with Lickliter for six seasons spanning from 2001-07. During Stevens' tenure as an assistant coach with the Bulldogs, Butler compiled a 131-61 record, won three Horizon League regular season championships and made four trips to post-season tournament play.

Stevens was introduced as the new men's basketball head coach at Butler University on April 4, 2007, just three days after his former boss, Todd Lickliter, was named head coach at the University of Iowa. He became the third consecutive former Butler assistant coach to be named head coach of the Bulldogs, and he served under the previous two - Thad Matta and Lickliter.

In his debut season with Butler (2007-08) he guided Butler to their first 30-win season. The Bulldogs were ranked in the "Top 25" of the AP and ESPN/USA Today national polls for 19 consecutive weeks, including a record three weeks in the "Top 10". At the age of 31, he became the third-youngest Division I coach to guide his team to 30 wins and was the youngest coach to do so in more than half a century. During the 2009-10 season he was named the NABC All-District 12 Coach and was a finalist for several national coaching awards as Butler ended the season as the No. 2-ranked team in the final ESPN/USA Today national poll. The Bulldogs compiled a school record 25-game winning streak during the season which also was the longest winning streak in the nation that season. Butler switched conferences following a third-place finish in the 2011-12 season in the Horizon League with a move to the Atlantic-10 where they would finish with 26 wins and three "Top 10" victories including a win over in-state rival Indiana who were ranked No. 1 nationally at the time. Butler reached as high as No. 9 nationally in the AP and USA Today polls during the season.

Stevens earned a B.A. degree in economics from DePauw in 1999. He was a four-year member of the basketball team at DePauw, earning the squad's "Coaches Award" in 1998-99. He and his wife, Tracy, have two children, son Brady and daughter Kinsley.

ROSTER BREAKDOWN

BY TAYLOR SNOW & MARC D'AMICO

BALL HANDLERS

The ball-handling position is arguably the most important role on the basketball court. These are the players who are responsible for facilitating the offense and controlling the pace.

BALL HANDLER

KEMBA WALKER

The C's will have a new floor general running the offense this season, as three-time NBA All-Star Kemba Walker as is set to take the reins. Walker, who is already established as a New England sports legend after leading UConn to the 2011 NCAA National Championship, will become a Boston fan favorite in no time, thanks to his electrifying offensive skill set and endearing personality.

The 6-foot-1 point guard is coming off of the best season of his career with averages of 25.6 points, 5.9 assists, 4.4 rebounds and 1.2 steals per game during his eighth campaign with the Charlotte Hornets. Having played in all 82 games, Walker ranked third in total points scored (2,159), field goal makes (731) and minutes played (2,863), fifth in 3-point makes (260), and 10th in free-throw makes (380), all of which helped lead to his first All-NBA selection.

As talented of an athlete as Walker is, his most valuable asset may be his character. He earned the 2017 and 2018 NBA Sportsmanship Award, which is given annually to a player who "exemplifies the ideals of sportsmanship on the court with ethical behavior, fair play, and integrity." That type of lead-by-example approach from a star player is something that should benefit the Celtics' locker room this season and beyond.

MARCUS SMART

The Celtics may have one unique asset that no other team in the league would: an All-Defensive First Teamer coming off the bench. Leading Boston's second unit, once again, could be the one-of-a-kind defensive mastermind, Marcus Smart.

After years of wreaking havoc against opposing offenses, Smart finally earned his first All-Defensive nod last season, while also earning the most Defensive Player of the Year votes among all guards. One of the contributing factors that allowed him to take a step forward in the voters' eyes was his improvement in the steals department, as his 143 snags placed him third in the league behind Paul George (170) and James Harden (158).

With that being said, Smart's most promising leap was on the offensive end, where he saw his shooting percentages skyrocket. The 25-year-old guard shot 51.1 percent from inside the arc and 36.4 percent from beyond the arc, which were both sizeable increases from his previous career marks of 42.2 percent and 29.3 percent, respectively. He also saw his turnover rate drop from 2.4 per game to just 1.5 per game, which indicated growth as both a ball handler and a decision maker.

...MORE BALL HANDLERS

BALL HANDLER

BRAD WANAMAKER

Brad Wanamaker didn't have many opportunities to shine last season, as he was buried behind Kyrie Irving, Smart and Terry Rozier on the depth chart. With two of those players now gone, however, the second-year point guard should be able to earn more playing time.

While his stints were often brief, Wanamaker still showed promise last season, as he averaged 3.9 points, 1.6 assists and 1.1 rebounds, while playing 9.5 minutes per game in 36 appearances. The 30-year-old international journeyman also shot 47.8 percent from the field and a team-best 41.0 percent from 3-point range, both of which were impressive clips for someone who played so sparingly.

BALL HANDLER

CARSEN EDWARDS

Many NBA pundits believe Boston got one of the greatest steals of the 2019 Draft when it selected Carsen Edwards with the 33rd overall pick.

The Purdue product was one of the most prolific scorers in the NCAA last season, as he finished third in the nation in total points (874) and fourth in 3-point field goals (135). He also put on one of the most dominant NCAA Tournament performances of all time, as he topped 40 points twice and broke the single-tournament 3-point record with 28 long-distances makes in just four games.

The 6-foot-1 guard saw his scoring skills translate over to Summer League play, as he averaged a team-high 19.4 points per game during just 23.4 minutes of action. That near point-per-minute rate suggests that Edwards could immediately impact Boston's offense as a microwave scorer off the bench.

BALL HANDLER

TREMONT WATERS

Another rookie ball handler who showed promise during Summer League was Tremont Waters. The 51st overall pick from this year's draft was Boston's leading passer during the summer session, having averaged 4.8 assists to go along with 11.2 points and 2.0 steals per game.

The 5-foot-11, New Haven, Connecticut native excelled in the passing game in college as well. He set an LSU freshman record with 198 assists during the 2018 season, breaking Ben Simmons' former record by 40.

Waters was also one of the top defenders in the NCAA last season, as he finished second in the country in steals per game (3.03) and was named SEC Co-Defender of the Year.

As a two-way player, Waters will split his time between the Celtics and their G League affiliate, the Maine Red Claws.

2019-20 ROSTER BREAKDOWN

THE WINGS

Wings are commonly the top shooters on the floor and are often relied upon to take on a heavy scoring load. Defensively, they'll typically be tasked with suppressing elite scorers on opposing teams. These are the players that will slash, score and defend, and could very well wind up filling in both as ball handlers and as bigs.

GORDON HAYWARD

The quietest acquisition the Celtics made all offseason was adding a fully healthy and operable Gordon Hayward to their roster. A season ago, he was "healthy," but he sure wasn't himself. The expectation is that he will be far closer to his former All-Star form during his second active season with the Celtics.

Many forget how good this guy was before he broke his ankle on Opening Night in 2017. He was an All-Star in the Western Conference during the 2016-17 season while averaging 21.9 points, 5.4 rebounds, 3.5 assists and 1.0 steals per game. He developed himself into an athletic playmaker who was able to defend at a high level.

That athleticism will surely show face far more often this season; if not every night, then most nights. He's going to be a focal point of the offense with his playmaking and shooting abilities. This version of Hayward – after a full offseason of workouts with no restrictions – is a player the Celtics simply did not have last season.

WING

JAYSON TATUM

Jayson Tatum is the second-highest rated player on the Celtics when it comes to ESPN's NBA rank. Tatum came in as No. 35 player in the league, behind only Kemba Walker on the Celtics, who was ranked No. 17.

It says a lot about Tatum's reputation that he is ranked so high after just two seasons in the NBA. The league knows that he has superstar talent, which was on full display during Boston's run to Game 7 of the 2018 Eastern Conference Finals. He was Boston's No. 1 scoring option during that run.

He might not be the unquestioned No. 1 option this season, but alongside Walker, he should be option 1A at the very least. Tatum has reportedly worked all summer to ease away from the midrange game, which was considered by many to be a chink in his armor, and concentrate on 3s and layups. Doing so this season should result in a spike in both free-throw rate and offensive efficiency for the ultra-talented 21-year-old.

Tatum averaged 15.7 points, 6.0 rebounds, 2.1 assists, 1.1 steals and 2.9 free throw attempts per game last season. It would be a safe bet to expect all of those numbers to improve this season.

WING

JAYLEN BROWN

Jaylen Brown was a late addition to Gregg Popovich's Team USA squad this summer, but he wound up playing a key role for the team at the World Cup. His average of 20.0 minutes per game ranked fifth on the team (minimum three games played) and he finished the tournament with averages of 7.9 points, 4.3 rebounds and 1.4 assists per game.

Those numbers might not raise any eyebrows, but much of Brown's play did. He was asked to be a defender and a rebounder, both of which he did at a high level, and he also shot the ball well (48.8 percent on 2s, 35.3 percent on 3s) and showcased an improved level of aggression.

The Celtics want more of that this season. With the departures of Kyrie Irving, Al Horford and Marcus Morris, Brown has moved up the totem pole when it comes to standing within the offense. He, like Tatum, will now slide into a similar role to the one he filled during the 2018 postseason.

...MORE WINGS

SEMI OJELEYE

Semi Ojeleye is a great piece for any team to have in its rotation. He's a strong and versatile defender who is willing to accept any role. That's a rare combo.

Ojeleye, who is entering his third season, has been called on at times to step into the lineup and serve as the team's primary defender against the likes of league MVP Giannis Antetokounmpo and others. He has performed well in such a role, and there's no reason to expect anything different this season.

The one area where Boston needs Ojeleye to improve is with his 3-point shooting. He made 32.0 percent of his 3s as a rookie and 31.5 percent of his 3s as a second-year player. Eclipsing 35.0 percent this season would be a welcomed improvement.

WING

ROMEO LANGFORD

There may be no bigger question mark on Boston's roster than No. 14 overall pick Romeo Langford. He is an unknown quantity to the team's fan base because an injury prevented him from playing in Summer League.

That injury has since healed, and word out of the Auerbach Center is that Langford has been very impressive throughout the remainder of his summer workouts. That's no surprise, considering that he was the No. 5 recruit in the nation coming out of high school – behind only R.J. Barrett, Zion Williamson, Cam Reddish and Bol Bol.

Langford played the majority of his one and only season at Indiana with a torn ligament in his shooting thumb, yet he still averaged 16.5 points, 5.4 rebounds and 2.3 assists per game. At 6-foot-6, with a wingspan that nearly reaches 7 feet, and with a high level of skill to boot, Langford has all of the tools to make a surprise impact this season.

JAVONTE GREEN

Javonte Green was a name that most Celtics fans probably didn't recognize prior to Summer League, but that changed once the 6-foot-5 wing began punishing the rims in Las Vegas.

Green, who averaged 10.8 points on 50.0 percent shooting, 4.8 rebounds, 2.8 assists and 1.8 steals per game during the summer session, was an electric force on both sides of the ball for Boston, as he unleashed mighty dunks on the offensive end, while also hampering opposing scorers on the defensive end.

Green's strong play carried straight through training camp and into preseason. He was the star of Boston's first fall exhibition, as he scored 15 points on 7-of-7 shooting during the fourth quarter of a 107-106 win over Charlotte.

The 26-year-old joins the Celtics with a few seasons of professional experience already under his belt. After starring at Radford University from 2011 to 2015, Green journeyed overseas and played four seasons across three different leagues. He secured LEB Oro league MVP honors during his first pro season, after averaging 18.0 PPG, 6.8 RPG and 2.2 SPG for Martín Petregalego.

2019-20 ROSTER BREAKDOWN

THE BIGS

As their title indicates, the bigs are the largest players on the floor. They're responsible for banging bodies in the post, protecting the rim and using their tall vantage points to communicate to the defense. Here are the six players who will likely be sharing that job for the Celtics this season:

BIG

ENES KANTER

Not only did the Celtics pluck one of the top ball-handlers off of the free agent market this summer in signing Kemba Walker, but they also inked one of the NBA's premier rebounders and interior scorers in Enes Kanter.

The 6-foot-11 Turkish center has been a force on the glass for the past eight seasons. He was particularly menacing against the Celtics, against whom he averaged 12.1 rebounds per game over his last nine matchups.

More specifically, Kanter has excelled on the offensive glass throughout his career. He has finished among the top three in offensive rebounding percentage during each of the past five seasons, while twice owning the No. 1 rate in the league (2015-16, 2017-18). That's good news for a Celtics franchise that hasn't seen a player finish among the top three in that department in more than 40 years.

On top of his rebounding, Kanter offers an elite interior offensive skill set. He is a career 54.1 percent shooter from the field, with most of those buckets coming from inside the paint where he uses an arsenal of post moves to beat his defenders. The 27-year-old has also expressed a desire to add a 3-pointer to his game, which would open things up even more for himself and for his teammates.

BIG

DANIEL THEIS

The Celtics will miss having both Al Horford and Aron Baynes manning their frontcourt this season, but their departures should open up the door for third-year big man Daniel Theis.

Theis has been a solid role player for the C's over the last two seasons, as he averaged 5.5 points, 3.9 rebounds and 0.7 blocks per game, while shooting 54.5 percent from the field. Having played an average of 14.3 minutes per match, those numbers translate to 13.8 points, 9.7 rebounds and 1.8 blocks per 36 minutes.

Last season, Theis shot 54.9 percent from the field, making him Boston's most efficient shooter among players who appeared in at least half of the team's regular-season games. He also excelled from the 3-point line, where he connected on 38.8 percent of his attempts.

Theis has also shown the ability to step up when given extended minutes. Take Boston's Dec. 8 matchup last season in Chicago for example: the 6-foot-9 big man earned a spot-start against the Bulls and produced 22 points, 10 rebounds, five assists and four blocks over 32 minutes of turnover-free action. He also had a plus-50 rating during that game, which the Celtics won by a franchise-record 56 points. He had another 20-point game Feb. 7 against the Lakers, during which he shot a career-best 9-of-11 from the field over 23 minutes of play.

ROBERT WILLIAMS

Another player who could jump up the depth chart is Robert Williams. The 6-foot-10 center showed promise during his rookie season, as he shot 70.6 percent from the field and blocked 5.1 shots per 36 minutes. His opportunities were slim, however, as he averaged just 8.8 minutes of action over 32 games.

The one place where Williams had a few chances to play extensively was in Maine, where he averaged 15.2 points, 9.8 rebounds and 2.4 blocks per game for the G League's Red Claws, while shooting an astounding 73.3 percent from the field. He also saw solid minutes during the 2019 Summer League in Las Vegas, where he produced a ridiculous 18.1 rebounds per 36 minutes during four appearances.

Coach Brad Stevens noted earlier this month that Williams has had "as good a summer as anybody" for the C's. With that in mind, this could be a great opportunity for the promising youngster to break out.

...MORE BIGS

GRANT WILLIAMS

Boston could, at times, have an all-Williams frontcourt, as rookie power forward Grant Williams will be vying for playing time as well.

The 22nd overall pick of the 2019 NBA Draft joins the C's with plenty of success and accolades already under his belt, having been a standout three-year player at the University of Tennessee. Williams was named SEC Player of the Year in back-to-back seasons, becoming the first player to do so in 24 years. Last season as a junior, he averaged 18.8 points, 7.5 rebounds, 3.2 assists, 1.5 blocks and 1.1 steals per game. He was named a consensus 2018-19 All-America First Team selection, as well as a finalist for the 2018-19 Wooden Award. He also helped to lead the Volunteers to a stay as the No. 1 ranked team in the nation.

Though Williams is "only" 6-foot-7, his 240-pound, muscular frame gives him enough strength to play the 5, and he's also skilled enough to play the 3 and the 4. Possessing such versatility should allow him to earn some solid starts throughout the season in various roles.

BIG

VINCENT POIRIER

One dark horse in Boston's frontcourt could be rookie center Vincent Poirier. Celtics fans may not know much about the French big man yet, but he has the potential to be an athletic rim-runner and rebounder off the bench.

The 25-year-old already has seven professional seasons under his belt, including the last two seasons that he spent with Baskonia of Liga ACB in Spain. During Euroleague play last season, Poirier averaged 11.9 points and a league-leading 8.3 rebounds per game, while shooting 62.1 percent from the field.

If the high-energy 7-footer can bring some of that success across the Atlantic to Boston, he could find himself earning a role with the C's.

TACKO FALL

Despite going undrafted in June, Tacko Fall was the most publicized figure throughout all of 2019 Summer League. Fans flocked to Thomas & Mack Center in Las Vegas to see the 7-foot-6 wonder, who towered above every player he competed with or against.

Though, it soon became clear that Fall was more than just a freakishly tall athlete; he displayed solid skill and agility for his size, which made him into a top priority for the Celtics to hang onto.

The 23-year-old Senegalese big man tallied 7.2 PPG on 77.0 percent shooting in Vegas, while also logging 4.0 rebounds and 1.4 blocks per game. What's remarkable is that he recorded those numbers while playing only 12.6 minutes per game, thus he averaged 20.6 points, 11.4 rebounds and 4.0 blocks per 36 minutes.

Fall's outstanding shooting efficiency this summer was not a fluke. During four years at the University of Central Florida, he shot 73.96 percent from the field, which is the highest mark in NCAA history by more than six percentage points.

The C's signed Fall to a two-way contract just before the start of the regular season. So, like Waters, he will likely split his time between Boston and Portland, Maine.

TD GARDEN

TD Garden, owned and operated by Delaware North, first opened its doors to the public on September 30, 1995. Located in the heart of the City of Boston and convenient by public transportation, TD Garden is an attractive destination for locals and Boston visitors alike.

In the 20 plus years since its opening, New England's premiere sports and entertainment arena hosts approximately 3.5 million people and 200 events annually. It is the proud home of the NHL's Boston Bruins, an original six franchise, and the NBA's storied Boston Celtics. Thanks to these high-profile tenants, TD Garden's rafters house more championship banners than any other professional sports arena in the country.

In addition to world-renowned concerts, sporting events, family shows, wrestling, and ice shows, the arena has played host to countless marquee events, including the Democratic National Convention, NHL All-Star Game, NCAA Frozen Fours, NCAA Women's Final Four, U.S. Gymnastics Olympic Trials, U.S. Figure Skating Championships and ISU World Figure Skating Championships, among others. TD Garden is proud to continue to attract these types of high caliber events to Boston and, in turn, generate more than $365 million in direct economic impact to the Greater Boston region over the last 20 years.

TD Garden's parent company, Delaware North, continues to be committed to reinvesting in TD Garden and making the arena the high watermark for best in class arenas in both experience and service. In 2018, Charlie Jacobs, CEO of Delaware North's Boston Holdings, along with TD Garden president Amy Larimer, announced a massive expansion of the 23-year-old arena taking place over the next two years. The $100 million private investment will provide a combined 50,000 square feet of additional space on all levels of the building and marks the 'Legendary Transformation' of TD Garden and the fan experience for generations to come.

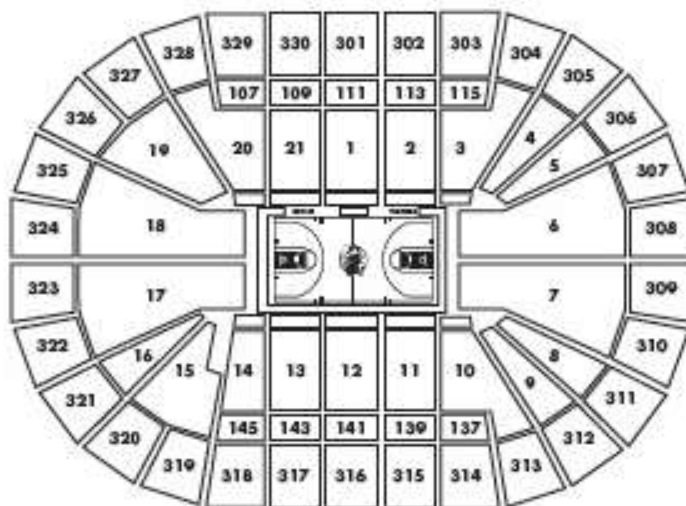

Along with the addition of new space, comes the opportunity to introduce a new brand and a redefinition of The Premium Club, now known as 'Boston Garden Society' – Boston's newest oldest sports and social club. Boston Garden Society is a commitment to a new tradition of sports and entertainment for the Boston business community and beyond, coming in the form of transformed spaces as well as upgraded amenities and experiences over the next few years.

Extending the guest experience beyond the four walls of TD Garden is paramount to its leadership, which is why Delaware North and Boston Properties broke ground on a joint venture project called The Hub on Causeway in 2016. The Hub on Causeway a 1.5 million square foot mixed-use project that is being constructed on the 2.5-acre site of the original Boston Garden. This transit-oriented development, featuring retail, office space, hotel, and residential building, is a significant investment that will bring substantial improvements to North Station, create major economic impact for the area and strengthen the viability of this important district in the City of Boston.

TD Garden's all-new, state of the art digital marquee on the exterior of the arena solidifies its place as the 'gateway' to the City. The digital marquee is a 3,000 square foot LED screen that is integrated with the arena's pre-existing exterior lighting elements and providing the public with real time game updates, upcoming event notifications, and amplifies community initiatives that are supported by Garden Neighborhood Charities, TD Garden's philanthropic arm.

Delaware North, owner and operator of TD Garden, is one of the largest privately-held hospitality and food service companies in the world. Founded in 1915 and owned by the Jacobs family for more than 100 years, Delaware North has global operations at high-profile places such as sports and entertainment venues, national and state parks, destination resorts and restaurants, airports, and regional casinos.

As if dealing with his mom's death wasn't hard enough, Sean had to adjust to a new home and new school. It was a lot to handle, so he struggled emotionally and academically. Lee from Communities In Schools helped Sean develop coping skills by finding positive outlets for his feelings. As his attitude improved, his grades followed—going from D's to B's. Now, he's focused on football and a promising future. There are millions of at-risk kids like Sean who need a caring adult to help them stay in school and succeed in life.
